For Your Information: Examples of APA Style for the Most Common References

(Adapted from Wikipedia, APA style, retrieved from http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/APA_style)

If you're using Word 2007 or later, you can have your references formatted to APA format for you. Go to the References menu, click on Insert Citation, and complete all fields in the Create Source dialog box.

Citations within the Text

Use the (Author, Date) format; for multiple citations, put them in alphabetical, not date, order:

- (Benchley, 1965; Smith, Benchley, & Thomas, 2009; Wiggins & Jones, 2008)

For multiple authors, ALL are listed in the first mention of the reference; subsequent mentions use (First Author et al., Date). If multiple authors are the same, spell out as many as needed to distinguish.

- first occurrence: (Smith, Jones, Benchley, & Wiggins, 2009)
- subsequent occurrences: (Smith et al., 2009)
- Smith, Jones, Jackson, et al., 2006; Smith, Jones, Brown, et al., 2006)

For quoted material from a paginated source, you must include a page number:

- (Benchley, 1965, p. 12)

For quoted material from a nonpaginated source such as a Web page, use paragraph numbers if they are visible (abbreviated para.); if not, use the heading and number of the paragraph below it (the heading can be shortened if it's unwieldy):

- (Golon, Kuchler, & Krissof, 2007, "Mandatory Labeling," para. 4)

E-mail, phone conversation, or other personal communication (cite in text only):

- (A. Monterey, personal communication, September 28, 2001)
